Hinders joins Edgio from AWS Elemental, an Amazon Web Services company, where he served as the head of global sales and customer success, overseeing go-to-market activities for AWS Elemental Media Services, CloudFront, Interactive Video Service, and Edge security products. Prior to AWS, Hinders held senior sales positions at Cisco, National Geographic and other leading public and private technology companies.

"We are excited to have a leader of Todd's caliber join our team and help Edgio accelerate our growth plans," said Lyons. "Building on our recent acquisitions, Edgio continues to execute on our strategy to be a leading solutions-based company, with a robust global edge network and expert services that power better business outcomes for our clients. Todd's unique background in media and technology services makes him the ideal sales leader to help bring this vision to life for our customers."

Edgio was formed in 2022 following Limelight Networks' acquisition of Edgecast, resulting in one of the world's largest CDN edge networks. The company's globally scaled, edge-enabled platform for both application and media delivery provides a developer-friendly solution for companies looking to deliver content quickly and securely.

"I feel extremely privileged to be a part of Edgio during this transformative time," said Hinders. "As I see it, there is tremendous potential for us to assist our media and entertainment clients, as well as our enterprise customers, who are seeking solution partners to power their media and applications businesses. The industry is demanding more turn-key managed offerings over do-it-yourself toolsets, and Edgio is well-positioned to meet this global demand. I am thrilled to work alongside the new management team who collectively share this vision."
