Prior to Edgio, Tom held several executive-level security positions, including Vice President of Security Operations at Alert Logic (now Fortra) where he led Alert Logic's global Security Operations Centers. Tom was also Co-Founder and Director of Security Operations for Rook Security where he oversaw its Managed Detection and Response services and developed proprietary security operations management technologies and processes for organizations ranging from fast-growing startups to Fortune 100 companies. Prior to his work in cybersecurity, Tom also served in the United States Army with the prestigious 10th Mountain and 101st Airborne Divisions in Iraq and Afghanistan, respectively. During this time, Tom earned several medals including the Purple Heart.

"Our customers in banking, payments, retail and media all sleep easier knowing we have a comprehensive product that includes bot management, cloud firewall, API protection, and DDoS protection that runs in more than 300 global points of presence. They also tell us they want security experts to provide the highest level of protection in today's rapidly evolving threat landscape," said Kapur. "Tom's deep expertise in security managed services, incident response and threat intelligence combined with his leadership and passion for cybersecurity align perfectly with Edgio's mission to provide business value through reduced risk and simplified edge security."

Edgio will be showcasing its security offering at this week's Black Hat conference, taking place in Las Vegas, Nevada. At the event, Edgio will demonstrate how it helps enterprise companies secure their business-critical applications and APIs with speed and confidence.
