Edgio's extensive development pipeline and cadence solidifies the company's position in the Leaders circle

PHOENIX--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Aug. 6, 2024-- Edgio, the platform of choice for security, speed and simplicity at the edge, today announced its recognition as a Leader and Outperformer in the GigaOm Platform Radar 2024 Report. The report examines and compares the offerings and capabilities of edge development platforms to help decision makers make informed investment decisions with a focus on compute capabilities and developer experience.

In this report, Edgio was evaluated on its performance, compute and security offering, which make up its Applications solution. Additionally, it received exceptional remarks for its development platform, globally distributed network, CI/CD integration, and web security capabilities. The report highlighted Edgio's JavaScript WebAssembly runtime used to power its serverless Edge Functions capabilities, its support of over 40 API-first Javascript web frameworks and GitOps workflows, as well as its fully integrated Web Application and API Protection (WAAP) suite.

"We are honored to be acknowledged by GigaOm for the strength of our edge development platform helping developers build high performance and secure web applications for their end users," said Richard Yew, VP of Product Management, Edgio. "As the platform needs of our clients change over time, Edgio is prepared to evolve with them to ensure we continue to provide great developer experience and improve velocity while ensuring security is baked in natively."

According to Principal GigaOm analyst, Andrew Green, "Edgio's capability to deliver edge-native execution environments, serverless functions, and IaaS-based compute instances positions the vendor in the Innovation/Platform Play quadrant. Edgio is an Outperformer because of its extensive development pipeline and cadence and is positioned in the Leaders circle."
